Family Budget of the Future

With the growth of income taxes, now touching the pocket-books of the great majority of Americans, and the diversion of still large sums from ordinary spending to the purchase of War Bonds and Stamps, the family budget faces some extraordinary changes in the near future.

3 More Jap Ships Damaged in Coral Sea

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA — (AP) — Japan apparently still was paying a disastrous price Tuesday for her defeat in the Coral Sea as General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced that Allied flyers were tracking down the scattered hiding remnants of a great enemy invasion armada and other units had damaged two and probably three more ships.

This raid brought the count of Japanese losses in the 6-day battle in the sea gateway northeast of Australia and in its sequel a ceaseless search of island hideaways to 23 or 24 ships in 8 days from the start of the Coral Sea battle through Monday.

Nevertheless Japan's plans have only been delayed and the threat still hangs over Australia that she will try again to smash southward. Air Minister Arthur S. Drakeford warned.

Two more enemy transports — casualty numbers 22 and 23 — were hit Monday in the Solomon Islands which is enclosed by the Coral Sea on the north, a communique from General MacArthur's headquarters announced.

The possible 24th Japanese casualty was a large tanker on which the communique said air raiders registered two hits or near misses in the Deboyne Island of the Louisiade group, a cluster of tiny islands in the Coral Sea off the southeast tip of New Guinea.

Answering the Mail Orders

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON — Answering the mail orders:

R. J. S. Dunsell, N. D. — Your query is one of many I have had about "what are my chances of being inducted into the army with dependents?" After a good deal of hammering at Selective Service officials here, the only answer I can give is that it depends almost entirely on your local board. If you have absolute dependents, as in your case a wife and child, I don't think your board will give you a 1-A rating until congress has passed some law providing for a maintenance payment to those you leave behind. If they should give a 1-A rating and call you up immediately, I don't think any one should be accused of being unpatriotic to appeal. This is total war and no man should dodge his responsibilities to his country, but Uncle Sam has no intention of wrecking two or three or more lives at this stage of the game merely to get one man into the service. This, of course, is my personal opinion. Selective Service officials have not and will not lay down any hard and fast rules. Each case must be treated individually on its merits.

C. C. W. Roselle, N. J. — War Production Board and Office of Price Administration officials here tell me that they have had a number of queries similar to yours — how individuals could contribute articles (as in your case, two typewriters) to the war effort. Off the record (because no general policy has been established) I am told that if those articles are not subject to collection in any of the scrap collection campaigns now in progress, you probably could do most with them by offering them to some of the secondary war agencies. As for your typewriters, why don't you offer them to the Red Cross, the United Service Organization, or any one of the many non-government agencies who are contributing so much to the effective prosecution of the war?

T. L. Parsons, Kas. — For the present, forced savings (a law that all persons must invest a portion of their earnings in war savings bonds) is a dead issue. There are, in the government, many experts who insist that forced savings are an absolute and immediate necessity to prevent inflation, even with price and wage control. But others, especially some high treasury officials, declare that the vol-

Goering May Meet Petain on French Position

BERNE, Switzerland — (AP) — With French-German negotiations reaching a state of urgency Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering may meet Wednesday with Chief of State Petain, chief of government Laval to reach final decision, it was reported Tuesday in informed diplomatic quarters.

These quarters predicted that the French would refuse to accept the Martiniere negotiations as one of the great decisions with a resultant break of relations with the United States.

It was reported that Otto Abetz, Adolf Hitler's representative in Paris and Laval met Monday at Moulins on the French demarcation line and laid the groundwork for the expected meeting with Goering.

Laval was said to have brought France to the break of three big decisions—Rejection of the American proposal for clarification status of Martinique; the degree of collaboration with the Axis and at least a preliminary settlement with disputed points with Italy.

In London Reuters in a dispatch dated from French frontier said Goering himself met Laval at Moulins according to diplomatic circles.

(Other unconfirmed London reports said Goering was the bearer of far reaching German demands with the threat that Italy would be given Tunisia and Corsica if Vichy did not yield.)

It was said also that special urgency was given to the French situation with the arrival of Goering in Paris while the German armies were making their first major attack of the spring in the Crimea.

Employment Up 600,000

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Works Project Administration reported Tuesday that employment in April was in March stood at 50,400,000 with seasonal gains in Agriculture being cancelled by a decline in other employments.

However, there was a decrease of 800,000 in unemployment as expected that number of persons left the labor market—a drop from 54,400,000 to 53,600,000 in the labor forces left 3 million job seekers out of work in April compared to 3,600,000 in March.

War Chokes Off U. S. Spice

WASHINGTON — American history began with the search for spices 450 years ago, but today we wonder—spice is scarce, but is it necessary?

Christopher Columbus accidentally discovered this country while seeking a western route to the spice lands.

Stuttgart to Get Large Air School

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Rep. Norrell (D. Ark.) said Tuesday that the War Department had authorized construction of an air force training school at Stuttgart, Ark., to cost approximately 3 million dollars. He said development would encompass 2675 acres and no further details were given.

Safeway Store to Open Here

Safeway Stores, Inc., second largest grocery system in the world, has signed a lease for a store location in Hope.

J. P. Brundidge, local real estate owner, announced Tuesday that Safeway had leased the east half of the former Chevrolet building in East Second street. The east half of the building will give Safeway a store with 50-foot front and 125-foot depth, with ample parking facilities for motor customers, Mr. Brundidge said.

He reported that Safeway signed a lease for five years, and they will do whatever remodeling is necessary. Safeway's fixtures manager inspected the building a week or so ago, and installation is expected to begin at once, Mr. Brundidge said.

Mr. Brundidge also announced that he had granted Scott Stores, East Second street, a 10-year lease on their present building and including the property now occupied by Henry Hitt's Shoe Store. Mr. Hitt is moving across the street to the location formerly held by Crutchfield's liquor store, the latter moving to South Elm street.

Mr. Brundidge filed a petition with the city Tuesday morning asking the annexation of a 154-lot block to be known as the Brundidge Addition to the City of Hope. It is located in the northeast area, on either side of old Highway 67, and lots will be put on sale at once, Mr. Brundidge said.

Baptists to Close Revival

"The Blood Stream of God's Word" was the subject of the Rev. James W. Middleton's sermon to a large congregation at the First Baptist Church Monday night.

Using as texts Leviticus 17:11, "For it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul" and Hebrews 9:22, "And without shedding of blood is no remission," Mr. Middleton said, "In the Book of God there moves a steady crimson line of redeeming blood from Genesis to Revelation. Before God dealt with man in judgment he dealt with him in grace."

Services of the revival will continue Tuesday and Wednesday nights at eight o'clock and Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. The subject for the Tuesday night message has been announced as "Running from God." An invitation extended to the public to attend the few remaining services of the revival.

Tommy Turner Gets Promotion in Army

MCCLELLAN FIELD, Calif. — Thomas Archie Turner, air depot group, Air corps, has been promoted from private to corporal at McClellan Field, California, in the Western theater of war operations. Corporal Turner's promotion was merited for outstanding services in his organization and in line with expansion of the United States Army.

But the United States did import an average of 118 million pounds of spices a year, and these have been practically cut off.

Household boarding won't help. Spices disintegrate into dust when left around for a long time, especially on warm pantry shelves.

Reinforced Jap Army Again Attacks Yunnan

CHUNGKING — (AP) — The Japanese have brought up reinforcements and are making a new attack on the Yunnan front in western China, a Chinese communique announced Tuesday night.

This followed earlier reports by a Chinese military spokesman that the main forces of the Japanese invasion column which struck into Yunnan from Burma had been driven back to the frontier town of Wanting but that heavy fighting with Japanese rearwards continued in the Chefang and Mangshih areas, 25 to 55 miles inside Yunnan.

Arrival of Japanese reinforcements apparently again converted the rear guard into an advance guard.

Other Chinese forces which had been bypassed in central Burma continued their advance in which they captured Maymyo and drove to the outskirts of ruined Mandalay moving northeastward in an effort to block the Japanese threat.

The spokesman said the Japanese had reached Kalewa 145 miles northwest of Mandalay. He said the Japanese were attempting to encircle Chinese troops in that section.

(The British in a communique issued at New Delhi said they had thrown back a force of Japanese at Shweygin, just south of Kalewa. These Japanese troops were advancing up the Chindwin river.)

On the Salween river front in the Shan state of eastern Burma against the force of Chinese which struck the Japanese near Loiilein were facing the Japanese across the river. All these central Burma forces are commanded by Lt. Gen. Joseph Stilwell, U. S. A.

Lemley Hears City Court

Sid Sanders, gaming, plea of guilty, fined $10.
Howard Turner, gaming, plea of guilty, fined $10.

Still Menaced by Japanese

Despite a sweeping U. S. victory in the Coral Sea Battle, Australia still faces invasion threat. United Nations leaders expect reinforced Jap fleet to start new drive southward. Map shows eastern section of Australia, most likely to be attacked.

British Lose 3 Destroyers

ROME — (AP) — Strong waves of German bombers sank three or four British destroyers caught in the eastern Mediterranean north of the Gulf of Salum, the Italian high command announced Tuesday.

"Two of the enemy naval escort planes were shot down," the command said. This action was part of activity described as intense over the Mediterranean and North Africa.

Bomber action was undertaken against the rear of the enemy (in Easter Libya) and upon Malta, the communique said.

"Axis fighters brought down four enemy planes. One of our planes did not return from maritime patrol."

The high command said the British lost 48 planes in combat with Italians in the last four days and "to those can be added many more certainly destroyed or damaged on the ground."

British Admit Loss

LONDON — (AP) — The British Admiralty announced Tuesday that three British destroyers had been sunk by German bombs in the Mediterranean.

Doughboys to Get Comforts

By E. C. DANIEL
Wide World Features Writer
London — Two service clubs that will give American soldiers everything from bed and bath to instructions in the King's English are being established in London and northern Ireland by the American Red Cross. Workmen are putting two buildings in condition for early opening and a third existing club also may be taken over for the American forces.

The London club, which will occupy the former Washington Hotel in the West End, will be provided with beds for 200 to 300 men who may be here on leave. Other facilities include showers, valet service, barber shop, canteen featuring back - home cooking, a ballroom for dances, movies and sports.

The northern Ireland hostelry, which the Red Cross calls a "super club," will be established in a partly - burned recreation center now being rebuilt. It will have a ballroom that will accommodate a...thousand couples, or three simultaneous basketball games, or boxing matches and perhaps roller skaters.

Some 800 Ulster girls already are enrolled as potential partners for the boys.

Both clubs will have information desks to "tell Americans 'anything they want to know.'"

Booklets are being printed with information on movies by Leslie Howard, on the theatre by Noel, on sports by Lord Burleigh, on transport, money and "how they talk over here."

The booklets explain that radio is "wireless," "turnings" are city blocks, "flats" are not punctured tires by apartments, telephones are "engaged," not busy. They also contain greetings from Canterbury Hensley and leaders of other churches, and notes to the effect that all Englishmen don't wear monocles and call every one a "old boy," as in Hollywood.

Caucasus Fight Soon Dies Down Russians Claim

MOSCOW — (AP) — A German offensive against Soviet positions blocking invasion of the Caucasus died down overnight as quickly as it had flared up on the Kerch Peninsula of the Crimea, the Russians disclosed Tuesday.

The mid-day communique said nothing important occurred Monday night indicating the Nazi rush had ceased at least temporarily. Whether Red resistance halted the attack or the German reverted to their old tactics of fighting by day and resting by night could not be determined immediately.

This was in sharp contrast with the Soviet's midnight communique which told of stubborn battles against the German offensive on the Kerch Peninsula.

While it is too soon for military dispatches to report development of the offensive advances reaching here said it was preceded by night mass air raids.

Red Star, Soviet army paper said the Germans had dropped thousands of bombs in the Crimea particularly incendiaries without results.

Full Swing, Says Nazis
(The German communique declared: On the Kerch Peninsula German and Rumanian troops attacked May 8, supported by strong formations of the German air force. The battle since then has been in full swing.)

(A Berlin military spokesman declared "Hell has been let loose over the Bolshevik positions in the Kerch Peninsula.")

(Squadron after squadron of German planes are racing over the Bolshevik front, here Junkers 87's are carrying out dive bombing attacks.)

(A British commentator in London said the Russians drove the Germans back after days of fierce fighting, which may have been intended as a forerunner of a major Nazi offensive.)

Must Clear Kerch Peninsula
(This informant said the Nazi drive in which infantry divisions led by tanks and paced by dive bombers was believed to have been a preliminary of a major offensive because the Nazis realize they must clear the Kerch Peninsula before advancing from Taganrog on to Rostov.)

(Nazi infantrymen were able to maintain an advanced position in only one sector and that now is being attacked savagely by Soviet troops he added.)

(Dispatches reporting that a German army of 2 million men had begun an offensive on the Donets front were regarded by informed London military circles as unfounded.)

(German military circles were not inclined to describe the battle as a beginning of a German spring offensive, but military spokesmen of the Wilhelmstrasse did say operations were the first great offensive undertakings since winter.)

(He said fierce mopping up operation on the central front also were of no mean importance.)

(The Kerch Peninsula is important, he said, because it has been strongly fortified for the Russians as a springboard for major operations, probably for a drive to conquer the Crimea.)

Love Will Hurtle the Barricades War Erects Against Marriage

By RUTH MILLETT

Where do college students get the idea that conditions have to be just right for marriage—or that the wedding risk is too great to take?

That is how they are talking today—whether or not it is what their individual decisions indicate. At a recent conference made up of representatives from a number of colleges the students discussed in great seriousness the problem of war marriages. They didn't think much of them for several reasons. They thought there was too great danger that the wife might be left to support herself—and maybe a child.

Two, there usually isn't time for a real honeymoon.

Three, there's a chance for faithlessness to develop—since a husband and wife will be separated.

Those college students are right in thinking that it is more difficult for a young couple, faced by separation and uncertainty, to make a marriage that will succeed than it would be for them to make a go of marriage in normal times.

But none of the obstacles they mention is reason enough for deciding that war marriages are a mistake.

What if a girl does have to support herself AND a child? It has been done before—and successfully too. Any girl with character would rather marry the man she loves, have his child and bring it up alone than let fear deprive her of marriage with the man of her choice.

Honeymoons are nice, and it's too bad young folks in war time usually can't manage to have them. But a successful marriage certainly isn't dependent on a happy honeymoon. If it were, none of those depression marriages, where a girl and boy were married on their lunch hour would have worked out.

War Marriage Is Worth The Risk

not enough character to remain faithful to each other through a period of separation—chances are they would find some other excuse for infidelity during the course of their marriage.

War marriages can't be like a peacetime marriage, but no phase of living is the same in war as in peace time. That certainly does not mean a war marriage isn't worth the risk. And the opinion of college students notwithstanding—young men facing war and possibly death will continue to marry the girls they love, and babies will come of some of those marriages, and if their fathers don't return, their mothers will manage somehow to give them a chance in life.

CARIBBEAN CRISIS

Bill Talcott had no difficulty in spotting the new man, Halsey, and he guessed the little fellow would be the company auditor. But the other two, a mustached character and a slender blond girl in plum-colored slacks, were entirely out of place.

CHAPTER I

It was a little past noon when the mailboat reached Abasco Island and Bill Talcott, who had been up since dawn, noticed with amazement the arrival of four visitors. He had no difficulty in spotting the new man Halsey, a rangy, lantern-jawed individual in his forties, and he guessed that the skinny little fellow with the voluminous briefcase would be the company auditor.

But the other two, a mustached character much the worse for the ride across Anegada Passage, and a slender blond girl in plum-colored slacks, were entirely out of place. It was only because the girl was so positive in ordering the transfer of her luggage that Bill Talcott decided she must be a relative of Halsey's who had come along to see him settled in his new home.

"I'm your successor," the rangy man admitted after he had gotten the dock under his feet. "Not surprised you didn't meet us in Saint Thomas. Had no idea it was such a long trip. This is Struthers, the auditor, and Mr. MacDowell."

The girl in the plum-colored slacks was fresh as a zephyr, as coolly unconcerned as a sueding cloud. "I'm June Paterson," she announced, wrinkling her pert nose. "Lowell Byrd's cousin. He cabled that you were expecting to return to the Continent. I've been spending a month with friends in Charlotte Amalie and Lowell's afraid I'll go native. You're to look after me."

"Wh-what?" Bill Talcott gasped. "Aren't you thrilled?" she murmured, lowering her lashes in exaggerated coquetry. And then she swept away to organize the confused scurrying of houseboys for luggage.

BILL TALCOTT gaped, wracking his brain to recall Lowell Byrd's cousin. Could this be the kid he'd danced with after the water polo meets at Cornell? Dimly he remembered a lot of arms and legs all wrapped in yards of green silk. It had been a dozen years since he had shared a room with Lowell Byrd in engineering school. Suddenly, because you don't go in for the social niceties after six years on a place like Abasco, he became conscious that he had neither shaved nor changed his clothes.

"I suppose you received Winston's cable?" Halsey was saying. "I presume your accounts are in shape for the customary audit?"

The new man's critical eye scanned the rocky, barren contour of the island. Already he was fretting in the closeness of the brassy, stifling heat; flaring his nostrils at the smell.

"I'm all set," Talcott said. "We'll go up to the house for a drink. You'll be able to get in a swim before lunch if you like."

Halsey hesitated, a half-smile on his lips, and the sweating little auditor cut in. "Thanks for the invitation, Talcott," Struthers said in a thin voice. "But if you don't mind, Halsey and I will get directly to work. If you'll just show us to the office."

Bill Talcott nodded in mild surprise. Such eagerness to buckle down didn't seem just right, not after a 1600-mile steamship ride topped off with a night and a morning on the jolting mailboat. Still, auditors were creatures of habit more than whim and Struthers seemed set on living up to his role. Shrugging, Talcott pointed to a cluster of galvanized buildings on the ridge and, taking June Paterson and the wobbly MacDowell in hand, he set off along the path to his bungalow.

TALL, frosted glasses appeared, juggled melted from sight, and Talcott relaxed with his guests on the terrace. From comfortable chairs they watched the rustling fronds of royal palms against the trade-wind sky, eyed the antics of a tiny lizard perched on the swaying bough of a flamboyant tree.

June Paterson fidgeted and her eyes glinted hostilely. She sniffed. "From what Lowell told me I expected to find you living in a cave. So you're leaving all this to go in the army?"

"I have to take up my commission," he said, and decided that she was horribly spoiled. He didn't think it necessary to tell her that "all this" included operation of a fertilizer plant. Her upturned nose must have told her that. He didn't tell her, either, that the population of Abasco sisted of tough blacks; that she was the first white woman who had set foot there in more than a year.

The recovering MacDowell filled his mouth with ice and grunted,

"Say, it's kinda nice here. This one o' the Virgin Islands?"

Talcott smiled. "No. You're now in the Netherlands, or what's left of them. It's quite a job to keep track of the minor pawns in the strategy of international chess."

"Holland! Gosh!" Talcott would have liked to ask him his connection with Halsey and Struthers; there hadn't been any MacDowells mentioned in the hectic correspondence with Old Man Winters. But he kept his peace. After six years of sameness a new face, even a close-mouthed one, was welcome. June Paterson supplied the lack with an endless round of questions about the extraction of nitrates, and they were on a fresh round of drinks when Halsey came up the path.

The new man's jaw was grim and his eyes were both puzzled and appraising. "Struthers wants to see you," Halsey said abruptly. "So soon?" Talcott flushed. "Aren't you fellows in a bit of a rush?"

"I think you'd better go," Halsey said. Again his eyes held swift appraisal, mirroring perhaps incredulous disappointment.

Baffled, Talcott got to his feet. Turning to June Paterson he said, "I trust you will excuse me. The boy will get you anything you need."

The ash-blond girl regarded him with a quizzical smile. "Trouble in paradise," she laughed. "Do we dress for dinner?"

"If you wish," he said coldly. Whatever concern he held at the strangeness of Halsey's manner was stifled when he entered the office. In its hot interior, Struthers had surrounded himself with books. The auditor's coat was off and his wet shirt clung to his skinny ribs. His eyes were enormous behind thick-lensed glasses, and he sniffed and said, "Talcott, you appear to be short in your accounts by $158,000. I suppose you've got some explanation?"

Comissions Hard to Get

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Those "quickie" commissions in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps are going to be scarce.

From now on, the boys are going to find it pretty hard—maybe impossible—to become shavetail, captains, colonels or brass hats without doing their full quota of right shoulder arms, squads oblique, hit the deck, and find your fox-hole.

For a long time now, congressmen have been sniping away at the boys who got their bars and stripes by pulling someone else's bootstraps. But often the sniping was more political than sincere. Recently it has taken a reverse turn. A week or so ago, Rep. Donald O'Toole of Brooklyn let loose a blast against heroes and nearheroes of the sports world who were being handed commissions as Army, Navy and Marine physical education instructors, that echoed in sports columns clear across the land.

Mr. O'Toole wanted to know why these lads, most of whom had gathered in many a fine dollar from the sports fans, should be given cushy berths in the training centers, with no more to do than to see that the boys did a daily 1-2-3-4, or got their quota of softballs.

A lot of fair-minded critics admitted there was something to be said on both sides, but when Chairman Carl Vinson, of the house naval affairs committee, and Rep.

Soldiers Go for Cookie Jar

POCATELLO, Idaho.—(P)—It took a mother to figure out that the shortest way to a soldier's heart leads through the cookie jar.

So Mrs. W. B. Harris and other members of the Pocatello American Legion Auxiliary have been distributing home made cookies to soldiers on troop trains passing through this busy railroad center. They have handed out four thousand and dozen cookies in the last nine weeks and letters of appreciation have come back from as far away as Australia.

"A social will follow. Each member is asked to bring two lumps of sugar."

back home for commissions that many congressmen have had. I can't imagine any one voting against it unless, of course, it's a record vote."

Neither Snow, Etc. When Draft Beckons

FORT COLLINS, Colo.—(P)—Now that it no longer is the weather censor's secret this story can be told:

A spring blizzard struck northern Colorado just before the 45-to-65 age group registered for selective service.

Some farmers arrived on horseback and afoot, over the snow blocked roads, but three fellows came in on a huge tractor. It had taken them 17 hours to travel 80 miles from what they called "the frozen north country."

The undersea continental shelf that runs from Newfoundland to Florida slopes gradually to its edge and then drops off abruptly into 1,500 fathoms depth.

Keeping tab on athletes in the service.

Civil Travis, former Washington Senator infielder and 1941 American League batting runner-up to Ted Williams, demonstrates to how he gets that way at the plate. Travis is leading the camp baseball team in hitting with a .475 average for the first 11 games. . . . Second to Travis in batting is Private Clade Corbitt, former Montreal shortstop. Official umpire at Wheeler is Corporal Joe Street, ex-International League arbiter. . . . and there isn't an officer who gets far in an argument with him on the field.

Leo McFarlane, Notre Dame star two-miler in 1934-35, is a lieutenant in charge of recreation at Camp Leonard Wood, Mo. . . . Marvin Milcoff, two-miler south-paw Cleveland tennis champion and former Ohio State freshman star, is a private on one of the Hawaiian Islands. Jim Straus, another ex-Buckeye luminary who was the Big Ten's leading ground-gainer as a halfback in 1939, is getting his basic training in the U. S. Air Corps at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Rollie Scheffer, business manager of the Portland Beavers of the Pacific Coast league, is a private at Monterey, Calif. . . . Assigned to the finance office at Mather Field, Calif., is Sergeant Bobby New, one of the greatest basketball players ever, turned out at DePaul University of Chicago.

Adding strength to the Mather Field baseball team is Joe Marz, former National League fly-chaser. And if Mather goes in for football this fall it will get top-flight fullbacking from Jim Kisselburgh, former All-Coast star from Oregon State.

Lieut. Carl Handy, instructor of aviation machinists' mates at the Alameda, Calif., Naval air station is the same Carl Handy who captained California's football team in 1931.

After four months of engineering training Private Fred Reuter, University of Iowa's Big Ten 220-yard dash champion, has been transferred to the medical department. . . . Sgt. Ole Skarup of the quartermaster-corporal Fort Jackson, S. C., is a former Cnish and Swedish fencing champion. . . .

Also at Camp Jackson are Mel Farrington, runner-up in last year's New Jersey Pro-Amateur golf tournament, and Jim Farrell, of Bridgeport, Conn., former national duck pin bowling champion.

No Control of Peach Disease

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — There is no known control of peach leaf curl this late in the season, V. H. Young of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture said here today following receipt of numbers of inquiries from growers.

Conditions during the last few weeks have been favorable for the development of peach leaf curl, and inquiries from growers indicate that the disease is fairly prevalent, the plant pathologist said. It is entirely too late to control or prevent the spread of the disease this year. Keeping the effect trees in good growing condition is only alternative now, he added.

Spraying with Bordeaux or lime sulphur before the buds swell in the spring is the only known control of this disease. If thoroughly done at that time, the spraying will give almost perfect control he said.

At the present time the only thing that can be done is to give the trees every possible opportunity to recover from the injury resulting from the disease. Every leaf that is affected will drop in the course of the next few weeks. New leaves will have to be developed to take their place. While these new leaves will not be affected by leaf curl, the food and energy necessary for forming them saps the energy of the tree, slowing down growth, cutting down the size and quality of the crop, preventing set of next year's fruit buds, and frequently promoting winter injury by preventing the wood from maturing properly. For these reasons, plans should be made to control the disease next year and everything possible done to keep the trees in good growing condition now, he concluded.

A success doesn't spend all he makes and a failure doesn't make all he spends.

The difference between good luck and bad luck usually is the frame of mind you happen to be in.

The Woman of the Month

By ADELAIDE KERR
Wide World Features Writer

Being a woman helped Dr. Margaret Mead reach top rank in the scientific world.

Part of her climb to high place among American anthropologists is due to industry and brains, but the rest can be credited to her sex. Only a woman could have made the close study she did of children and babies among cannibal and less savage tribes in the south seas.

As a result of her findings Dr. Mead has received the Society of Women Geographers Gold Medal for outstanding achievement—the first bestowed on a woman in nine years. Because of it she is my nomination for Woman of the Month.

She Keeps Busy
Even without gold medals Dr. Mead deserves a hand. She is Associate Curator of Anthropology at the American Museum of Natural History in New York. She also holds a war job as Executive Secretary of the Committee on Food Habits of the National Research Council. She keeps both running by shuttling between Washington and New York where she also collaborates on a book with her anthropologist husband, Gregory Bateson of Cambridge University, England. They have a three-year-old daughter.

Chestnut-haired, blue-eyed Dr. Mead has been whisking around the south seas on anthropological research ever since she left college. For years she was a sort of "infant terrible" among anthropologists because of the attacks she made on old theories of behavior. Immediately after she received her M.A. from Columbia University in '24 she left to study the adolescent girl in Samoa on a National Research Council Fellowship.

Debunking Adolescence
"It was fashionable then," she said, her eyes sparkling with lively interest. "to say that adolescence is terrible, that nobody could do a thing about it, that it was just something you had to live through. But in Samoa I found and studied a group of adolescents who passed comfortably and happily through the period without storm and stress. If you find one place like this you prove that the troubles of adolescence do not lie in physiology, but rather in social conditions."

Dr. Mead returned to New York and at 24 wrote her first book, "Coming of Age in Samoa"—a best seller. After that, between studies for her doctorate, she made a series of south sea trips, studying six tribes and steadily younger children. She visited the Admiralty Islands, New Guinea, in '28, studied children from two to six and wrote "Growing Up in New Guinea." Then she spent 1931-33 in another section of New Guinea where she studied babies from and progressed around the circle to their mothers. Her problem on that trip was: What effect it has on a baby to know it is a boy or girl.

South Seas Surprise
"I studied three tribes and found some surprising things," she said. "In the first both men and women were what we would call maternal—the men went to bed when the women had children. In the second both men and women were what we would call masculine and both sexes hated children. In the third all the men were stern and jovial, wore no ornaments, ran the market, and slapped each other on the back and dressed the men and children up fit to kill. I found that the great proportion of attitudes which we think are sex-linked could be shifted by a different social emphasis."

On the trip which Dr. Mead made to Bali in 1936-38 with Mr. Bateson, she forsook her attack on old theories.

Seeks World Culture
"Instead," she said, "I studied other societies to see what they are able to develop from human beings that we have not developed and apply that knowledge to the problem of building a world culture which will use all the potentialities of human beings instead of just a few." Result of that trip will be a book liberally illustrated with photographs called "Balinese Character—a Photographic Analysis."

In her woman's work in anthropology Dr. Mead has traveled far, but nearly anyone who has watched her will tell you she can be expected to travel further still.

That is Big Bill Batt's suggestion as to what a 1942 Kipling may have to write as the epitaph for thousands of American men who never will come back from Batavia, Burma, India, Australia, and later from the continent of Europe.

It is good news that Mr. Murray is willing to lose his shirt for a victory over the axis. But how about our American Expeditionary Forces—will they be satisfied if we send them the C. I. O. chieftain's shirt to wave at Japs and Germans? Will the fathers and mothers, the wives, sisters and brothers of those who die in battle concede that Mr. Murray's shirt is ample contribution from a man in his position?

False Rumor, Phony Figures, News Leak

WASHINGTON — That segment of the population which has believed the fake hue and cry that the investigation of Father Coughlin's Social Justice represented a threat against all "freedom of the press" might take into consideration some of the other false rumors that have been spread by like vermin. One die that has been whispered by such people and has been traced directly to the women in the Social Justice crowd is that the moves to establish women's auxiliaries for the Army and Navy were nothing more than veiled white slave recruiting drives to procure women for the soldiers and sailors of the armed services. If there is any suppression of civil liberties in squelching people who spread stuff like this, bring on Hitlerism.

Lt.-Gen. Brechon Somervell, commander of the Service of Supply, and his experts say it's impossible to make any accurate calculations of how many workers are needed behind the lines to keep one soldier in the field. There have been unofficial estimates running from three to 18. The top figure is obviously ridiculous, for on that basis an army of 10 million men would need 180 million workers in reserve, and the total population of the country, including babies, is only 130 million.

In the first World War, just before the armistice, the A. E. F. had about two million men, 36 per cent of whom were in the Service of Supply. This being a mechanized or gadget war, the supply problem is more complicated, and the ratio may be higher. But the effort is being made to keep that ratio as low as possible.

If you want a rough guess of how you'll be fixed at the end of this year or a year later, here's one official economic guess from the Henderson staff: By the end of 1942 the standard of living will be down to what it was in 1935. A year later, it will be back to the level of 1932.

Leaky Niagara
Big Washington news has a way of leaking out long before it is officially announced. A lot of it does not leak down the gully but the trickles indicate what's coming. That was particularly true on the recently announced General Maximum Price Regulation. The leaks on this schedule were so frequent and so many that Dexter Keezer, administrator of the Consumers' division, dubbed it "The Niagara of Leaks."

The War Labor Board, which is supposed to settle the labor controversies that can't be conciliated, is up to its neck. The board has had about 125 cases referred to it for settlement some 25 of them being inherited from the reorganized National Defense Mediation Board. The board has settled only 30-odd cases.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson every now and then has to get into what he calls a lecture on economics to explain some of the background for his anti-inflationary moves. "A lot of people," he says, "have had to take courses in Henderson I or Henderson II."

Battle in Bolivia
If the Board of Economic Warfare were of a mind to do so, it might issue communiques, just as the Army and Navy do, telling of battles fought on the fields of international big business.

For instance, here is one of the engagements for which the economic warrior strategists might have to map battle lines soon: Argentina, unable to get her usual rubber supplies from the United States, has been sending rubber buyers into Bolivia to scout for native crude rubber, in competition with U. S. buyers. To beat the Argentines, several attacks might be made. First, Argentina might be guaranteed a certain percentage of her normal manufactured rubber imports from the U. S. Or U. S. buyers might make a deal to buy all the rubber Bolivia can produce thus freezing Argentina out of the market. Or, long-term contracts must be offered bolivian producers by U. S. buyers, at prices higher than Argentina can pay and with bonuses for amounts delivered over contract quotas, to encourage production and make the Argentine buyers' work more difficult.

See History of Economic War for Survival, yet to be written, as to how it all comes out, and a thousand other battles just like it, only worse.

Meanwhile, the Red Cross has several recreational and social service workers at large among the troops in northern Ireland.

At one hospital, for example, Nancy Jones, of Nevada City, Calif., sits on the beds, stuns a ukulele and sings to the boys, runs errands for them, rounds up girl friends and sends cables to families.

Marion Spaulding, of Lowell, Mass., gets her one better — she brings a baby piano into the ward and runs a game room for convalescents.

Jean Napier, of Atlanta, Ga., a social worker, acts as mother confessor, hears tales of woe, gives advice.
